NEEDLESS LOSS ON STOCK

The number of farms showing stock receipts too small to cover the value of the feed consumed is surprisingly large. Surveys of the College of Agriculture indicate rather conclusively that this is chiefly the result of improper feeding and care, rather than inferior breeding or quality of the live stock. This is particularly true with strictly meat producing animals such as hogs and beef cattle, which possess more uniform ability in production. Too much stock is underfed and poorly sheltered. While it sometimes pays to rough stuff thru winter, especially in the western part of the state, as a rule it is a very expensive practice. A large percentage of the pigs lost at farrowing time or soon following is the result of negligence. In many cases this has meant the difference between profit and loss.

HOOS' CHOICE BEST

In a test to determine whether or not it is more profitable to feed hogs by the self-feeder method or by hand feeding, two lots of 19 fall pigs were fed 103 days on corn, tankage, and skim milk on the O. A. Rodekorf farm of Madison county. During this period the self-fed lot gained 165 pounds per pig or an average of 1.6 pounds per day, costing $5.19 per 100 pounds of gain, while the hand-fed lot gained 151.3 pounds per pig during the same period or an average of 1.47 pounds, costing $5.50 per 100 pounds gain. In other words Mr. Rodekorf could have raised 20 hogs with the self-feeder on the same amount of feed that it took to raise 19 hogs by hand feeding. Other work of this nature will be carried on next winter. The tests are being conducted in cooperation with the county agricultural agent demonstrations of Madison county.

LIME FOR PRESERVING EGGS

Eggs laid during April and May are of better quality for preserving than those laid later in the summer. One pound of air-slacked lime added to cooled, boiled water is equally as good a preservative for eggs as water glass. Only clean, fresh eggs with sound shells should be "put down." Use an earthen jar. Stir the lime thoroughly into the water and drop the eggs in as gathered. Some lime settles to the bottom of the jar but does no harm. Two or three inches of the solution should cover the eggs to allow for evaporation. Keep in a cool place, preferably in a cellar. Eggs preserved by this method may be safely kept for eight months. When ready for use, remove only the eggs that are necessary.

REMEDY FOR STRINGY BRINE

Warm spring days often cause the souring of the brine in which meat is being cured that has been butchered the latter part of winter. The most common kind of souring shows itself in a string of white mold which floats near the surface and gives rise to the term of ropy or stringy brine. The College of Agriculture says that such meat should be removed from the brine at once and be soaked in fresh water and be well scrubbed. The barrel in which it is contained should be thoroughly scalded. The meat may then be repacked and new brine be added. If thoroughly boiled the old brine may be used, but the new brine is safer and is considered almost as cheap.

"WORSE THAN CHOLERA"

Sours in pigs is declared by one of Nebraska's prominent hog raisers to be more destructive to the swine industry of the state than hog cholera. The causes are overfeeding, change in feed, decayed feed, lack of exercise, or dirty water. Sometimes filth in pens and bedding is an additional cause when it is taken in to the pig's system from the sow's udder or from the navel. The College of Agriculture says that the correction of these conditions is the first measure to be adopted, and that in case scouring has started, the sow's feed should be cut down to a small amount of oats or bran. When the trouble is corrected, the ration should be increased fairly gradually.

OFFER LIST OF CHICKEN RATIONS

A suggested list of rations for chicks from the time they are hatched up to maturity may be had upon application to the Poultry Husbandry Section of the College of Agriculture. The sheet is of convenient size for tacking up for reference.

SELECTING EGGS FOR HATCHING

The College of Agriculture offers the following suggestions concerning the selection of eggs for hatching:

Select medium to large eggs of good shape and color.

Over-sized, ill-shaped, small, and badly tapered eggs, as well as those with wrinkled shells should not be used.

Small eggs produce small chicks.

Fresh eggs are most desirable. Old eggs are weaker.

Fertility may be told only by incubation.

Shape or size of the egg has nothing to do with the size of the chick.

tion are dry rot, stem rot, wilt, and GARDEN WORKERS' CONFERENCE.

School garden supervisors from all over the state are in session the latter part of this week at the College of Agriculture at Lincoln receiving instruction in technical gardening and in the administration of the work. A large number of towns are hiring supervisors to look after this work in connection with the local schools. In a number of other communities, gardening clubs have been formed without reference to school credit.
